homes, and our people, but they want to rob us of our birth-right and our lawful, and undisputed title: Shame on them, I say.

But how is it? Tell me! Is it possible, or natural, or even probable; That those pale faces can with impunity dethrone Your Majesty? Impossible!

I must now conclude-and I again repeat in the name of God, that ere long I may have the consolation of hearing of Your Majesty is restored to her legitimate position, as Supreme Ruler of the Hawaiian Kingdom. All unite with me in wishing Your Majesty all the honor, and respect that in our power lies, for your happiness, and well-being.

And beg to remain
Your obedient servant
Henry Nanaja

Majesty, Queen of Hawaii,
and its dependencies,

Your Majesty:- I find the longer a time elapses before I make my apology for not having written before, the more awkard I feel at the idea of addressing you. My greatest Consolation, however, is derived from this- that you will not attribute my silence to neglect but to a multiplicity of business. Your Majesty would pardon me if you knew in what a sea of confusion I am sometimes in. To give a description of it is im-possible. I can assure your Majesty, That my heart was filled with a deep melancholy when the sad news was announced to me of your being deposed. I was in hope that it was a false rumour. But alas! it is only too true. However, I trust That Your Majesty will not repine, nor become low-spirited, at this to you unhappy, and unlooked for event: Yet a little while and all may be well. I sincerely hope so. I do hope, and ever hope, That ere long to hear of your Majesty being reinstated to your proper, and legitimate position. I entirely agree with Your Majesty's sentiments contained in your letter. Our feelings are reciprocal.

Every principle of right, and justice, and equity, and humanity, cries out against this tyrannical action on the part of the White man. To my idea those pale-faced, mealy-mouthed, silvery tongued, politicians are alike and akin to Lawyers, a bad and dangerous clique. I am afraid That Your Majesty has been altogether too lenient, and indulgent to those treacherous sycophants, and usurpers.

The more I think over your sad distress, The more my heart revolts, and sickens, at such a presumptous proceeding. This to my way of reasoning is the greatest piece of injustice I ever heard of. The pale-faced marauders are not satisfied with robbing us of our Lands, our
