London. July 15. 1824

The King of the Sandwich Islands was taken ill on the 15th. of June.— His symptoms were so severe as to require the loss of Blood by which he was relieved. He continued so well as to justify confident hopes of his recovery until the death of the Queen; soon after which, changing materially for the worse, he Gradually declined until he died without a struggle or a groan at four o'Clock on the morning of Wednesday, July 14th. 1824, surrounded by those affectionate attendants who had accompanied him on his voyage to England.—

The King was attended in his illness by the Physicians of his Majesty the King of England in conjunction with ourselves.

London. July 15th. 1824

The Queen of the Sandwich Islands having suffered much from Inflammation of her chest during her voyage to England, was seized on the 11th of June with the Measles which from the commencement were attended with very severe symptoms, and a return of the Inflammation. The violence of the disease was subdued for a time by active remedies, but returning afterwards in an aggravated degree, and accompanied with a distressing Inflammation of the Eye she at length sunk under her complicated maladies with little apparent suffering, with perfect serenity of mind, and retaining her senses to the last.- *

Report of the Physicians who attended the late King and Queen of the Sandwich Islands under the Illness of which they died.

The King and Queen of the Sandwich Islands and their Suite, caught the Measles a short time after their arrival in England.

This disease is not known, it seems, in their native country.. In this Island it is of universal prevalence, and is not dreaded more from its immediate danger than from the consequences to which it frequently gives rise; such as — Inflammation of the Lungs, and consumption.

The malady attack'd all the Visitors from Owyhee with a peculiar severity; and its malignant influence was heightened by the unusually cold and damp weather which prevail'd in the month of June.

All these estimable People suffered — painfully; but they submitted with so much patience and good sense to the remedies on which our experience induces us to rely, that we entertained good hopes that the lives of all would be spared, tho we had some — reason to fear for the Queen's safety from an early period of Her indisposition. Her youth however, and the strength of Her constitution enabled Her to struggle effectually against the violence of Her distemper until the last three days of her Life, when Her frame appeared to be exhausted.

The intelligence of Her extreme danger, communicated to the King, and confirmed soon after by Her death*, occasioned such a depression in the Kings spirits; and so entirely and suddenly stopped the progress He was making towards recovery, that He sank also very soon afterwards†.

* July 8th/24

† July 14.

We deplore the loss of these unfortunate Strangers with more than common sorrow, and find our best consolation in the reflection, that we paid them the same attention (indeed we were commanded so to do by our own humane Government) and watch'd and administered to their complaints with the same zeal which such an Illness would have excited had it befallen the most illustrious of our countrymen; and in the recollection that every effort we made to save the King and Queen was assisted strenuously by the faithful and affectionate attachment of their Native attendants.. Given under our hands at London this 30th day of July.
